

In the Spirit of the Republic

Singapore, located at the tip of the Malay peninsula, historically part of the Kingdom of Singapura, a part of both Majapahit and Siamese kingdoms, and previously known as “Temasek” officially became independent as the Republic of Singapore on 9 August 1965.

A decade of seismic change across the world, the 1960s was a time of hope, promise and new beginnings. Counterculture and social revolution defined an era of new music, clothing, intoxicants and thinking. Boundaries were tested and pushed. The genesis of the modern day Lion City was one of these momentous occasions of the decade.

Republic is our homage to now and then – celebrating freedom, expression and individuality. We present flavours, ingredients and sensations inspired by the influential hallmarks of the 1960s and four cultural epicentres of importance and meaningful change. Enjoy the stories while you imbibe on liquid history.

S I N G A P O R E

With origins within Malayan kingdoms through to Peranakan settlement and European colonisation, Singapura had a rich and colourful history before becoming its own Republic in 1965. While this was momentous enough, there are more localised stories we celebrate herein.
